

Jason Brogden

Jason Brogden is a Director at Engage Consulting Limited, a consultancy providing specialist industry knowledge-based consultancy and information services to the energy and utilities sectors.

Jason is a prominent energy industry consultant with a proven track record of successful programme, project and operational management, as well as in-depth knowledge of the business processes and systems underpinning competition and metering in the energy industry.

For the last three and a half years, Jason has been the Smart Metering Programme Manager at the Energy Retail Association for the largest 6 domestic energy retailers in GB. This has been an industry-leading programme and Jason and his team have delivered draft proposals for an operational framework for smart metering, as well as providing smart metering policy support.

Jason has also been involved in work in the water sector on intelligent metering and in supporting network requirements for smart metering for the Energy Networks Association.
