

ASSOCIATION FOR

demand response
+ smart grid

Dan Delurey's Biography

Dan Delurey is President of the Association for Demand Response and Smart Grid (ADS), a non-profit organization (originally formed in 2004 as the Demand Response Coordinating Committee) created to increase the knowledge base in the U.S. on demand response and facilitate the exchange of information and expertise among demand response practitioners and policy makers.

Delurey has over 25 years of experience in the energy industry, with the majority of it in the electricity industry and much of that working on demand side issues and programs. Prior to founding the DRCC, he was Chief Marketing Officer for Nexus Energy Software. Previous to that, he was Vice President of External Relations for New England Electric System, where he had responsibility for state and federal affairs and corporate communications. Earlier in his career Delurey held marketing-related positions with both Boston Edison and Southern California Edison. Prior to those positions, he worked on demand side programs and products at Xenergy and at the New York State Energy Office.